

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The production of this year's Comprehensive Accountability Report (CAR) was accomplished only through the willingness of many to lend their time and expertise. Secretary Peterman, the Executive Leadership Team, and the Office of Program Accountability want to acknowledge those contributions and to express gratitude to all who have helped in this process.

While the CAR is generated with help from a great many persons, the majority of work is done by the team of employees that work in the Office of Program Accountability's Bureau of Research and Planning. Bureau members Mark Greenwald, Susan Quinn, Anne Cooper, Kathy Jackowski, Robin Richardson, and Nathan Epps worked diligently to ensure the information in the report is accurate and reliable. Their experience and abilities as researchers and statisticians are invaluable assets to the Department. They worked tirelessly and with great dedication over many months to produce this excellent product that reports on the performance of the Department and its contracted providers.

State agency personnel, both inside the Department as well as outside, were essential to contributing to the production of this year's CAR. A special thanks to DJJ staff Amanda Scott, Debbie Gries, Libby Grimes, Julia Strange, Wanda Harper, Terri Eggers, Jennifer Rechichi, Michael Baglivio, Dr. Lisa Johnson, Debra Morris, Jason Welty, Samadhi Jones, Gwen Steverson, Sonny Peacock, Jack Ahearn, Paul Hatcher, Gene McMahon, and David Douglass. In addition, thanks go out to David Ensley, Department of Corrections, and Sue Burton, Florida Department of Law Enforcement, for providing data from the adult criminal justice system used to assist in determining recidivism.

Data integrity is essential when reporting outcomes and evaluations for program performance. The Department's Juvenile Justice Information System (JJIS) is a comprehensive database used to generate most of the data and information presented in the CAR. Data Integrity Officers (DIO) are responsible for monitoring the accuracy of the data input into JJIS and making adjustments and corrections when errors are made. Their work is critical to ensuring the integrity of information reported in the CAR. Special thanks go out to Al Lewis DIO supervisor, and DIOs Suzanne Bailey, Barbara Campbell, Jeffery Clarcq, Donna Clayton, Michelle Duncan, Amy Martinez, Dennis McClure, Patricia Messick, Samantha Reid, Jesse Schrage, William Scott, Michelle Simpson, Susan Stormant, Kara Ullom, and Laurie Workman.

The Department also wants to thank members of the Justice Research Center, Kristin Winokur, Julie Blankenship, and Greg Hand for their assistance in the production of the Program Accountability Measures reported in the CAR. Their research expertise and passion for improving the juvenile justice system make them perfect partners in this endeavor.
